

Anthropology/Archaeology

Thet Htet San

Submitted by Phyllisa Eisentraut

Our selection of this year's outstanding Anthropology/Archaeology student was easy - Thet Htet San. Thet is an excellent student with an inquisitive disposition. She always excels academically, but this semester especially in linguistic anthropology, she has further honed her anthropological lens frequently engaging her instructor with questions concerning the intersection of language and culture. When faculty have discussed with her her desire to pursue anthropology, she has a remarkable sense of what she wishes to study and how she plans to go about accomplishing her goals. This past summer she interned with the Santa Barbara History Museum's Anthropology Department and this semester she is a Lab Assistant for biological anthropology. Thet compliments her strong work ethic with remarkable determination, communication skills, and genuine passion. She is a pleasure to work with and we expect her to do great things in the future.
